Ahmed M. Hussen

EDUCATION:

1975 - 1978	Ph.D., Natural Resource Economics, Oregon State University
1973 - 1975	M.S., Natural Resource Economics, Oregon State University
1970- 1973	B.A., Economics and Business, Lewis & Clark College, Oregon

Fields of Specialization: Environmental & Resource Economics and Applied Microeconomics

ACADEMIC AND ADMINSTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS:

Primary:

Sept. 1985 – present Professor of Economics, Kalamazoo College,

June 1988 – March 2000 Chair, Department of Economics

Sept. 1979 – June 1985 Assistant Professor of Economics, Allegheny College, PA.

Others:

0 / 1007 /
Sept. 1987 – present	Founder & Co-Chair of the Environmental Studies Program

Aug. 1999 – Dec. 1999Visiting Scholar, Africa University, ZimbabweJuly 1990 – Aug. 1991Visiting Professor, Waseda University, Tokyo, JapanSept. 1996 – Aug. 1998Chair of the Faculty Executive (Senate) Committee

TEACHING EXPERIENCE:

- Over the past two decades, on the average, I have taught six classes a year requiring at least four different preparations.
- Courses taught includes: Introductory and intermediate microeconomics, introductory macroeconomics, applied statistics, calculus for economics, managerial economics, Japanese economy, cost-benefit analysis, environmental and resource economics, and senior seminars on contemporary global environmental issues.
- Academic advisor of 35 to 40 students a year.
- Senior thesis supervisor of 7 to 8 students annually.

TEACHING AWARD:

The recipient of the 1996 Florence J. Lucasse Lectureship award for excellence in teaching; Kalamazoo College's highest faculty award.

MOST RECENT PUBLICATIONS:

"Valuing the Environment: A critical Appraisal from an Ecological Economic Perspective," Ecological Economics, Forthcoming

Principles of Environmental Economics: Economics, Ecology and Public Policy, Routledge Publishing, London, 2000.

PROFESSIONAL AFFILIATION: American Economic Assoc., the Assoc. for Environmental and Resource Economics, and International Assoc. for Ecological Economics.